Independence Square – This is the historical place where the Union Flag was lowered and the Malayan flag was raised for the very first time at the struck of midnight of 31st August 1957. From then on, Merdeka Square has been the venue for the annual Merdeka Parade.

Sultan Abdul Samad Building – One of the historical landmarks in the city center and it is the offices of the Ministry of Information, Communications and Culture of Malaysia. The building has a shiny copper dome and a clock tower which is 40 meters high. The building serves as a backdrop for many essential events for the country.

National Monument – A sculpture which was built in remembrance of the brave soldiers who died fighting for the independence of our country. This historic sculpture has also marked its place in the book of records for being the tallest freestanding group of bronze sculptures.

KL Tower – Is a 421m high telecommunications and broadcasting tower. This tower has an observation deck, where you finally can manage to get a bird's eye view of the city.

Batu Caves – One of Malaysia's most visited attractions. Malaysia's Batu Caves are home to one of the most important Hindu shrines in the world: a joyful homage to Lord Murugan, who triumphed over the demons in Tamil Hindu lore. The massive staircase that leads to the caves is comprised of bright bands of color. It feels like you're ascending a rainbow into the chambers of the gods.
